

Accessing Clean Water in Rural Uganda

We're partnering up with the Swiss Government and Act-U to drill 30 new boreholes in Kotido, Uganda before the end of 2019. This will be the third time we've worked together in the past five years in this drought-stricken region. For our part, we must raise £50,000 to give rural communities access to a safe and stable water supply. It is a big commitment for a small charity, but the benefits are beyond measure. Thank you for any help you can give.

Please Help: Because SPICMA is still run by volunteers we are able to send the whole of your donation to the project of your choice. You can donate online via our website www.spicma.org or download a form and send us a cheque by post.
